The Great Ovation.

The American Embassy to St. Petersburg to Cronstadt, twenty miles from St. Petersburg, on Helsingfors, a hundred and fifty miles distant, a Russian fleet—as we learn by a telegram dated on the 7th instant-was sent to welcome and escort them. The Czar went to Cronstadt on Thursday or Friday, and visited the fleet. On Saturday, the American officers went to the Manfeufel insists on the immediate payment of capital, where they were received with music and the cheers of fifty thousand people, while handkerchiefs waved from the windows and American flags floated on the house-tops. At night the public buildings were illuminated, and a grand ball closed the honors shown to the guests for that day.
